Grow together – For rural areas full of life and joy!

Do you have a house that you no longer have the opportunity to give a little love and care to, maybe it can become someone else's future dream?

More and more people see added value in living and working outside our urban areas - we think it's fantastic at Boden and Luleå municipality. However, the demand for houses is bigger than the current supply, which leads to a limited housing market for those who are attracted by a life in the countryside. There is also not the same opportunity for new construction as in the metropolitan regions, and therefore you as a property owner become an incredibly important enabler for continued development.

During the spring of 2021, Boden and Luleå municipality carried out an inventory of uninhabited properties in the Råne and Vitå river valleys via the cross-municipal project Grow together. According to our information, you owned a house where no one was registered. Do you have your own plans for the house or would you consider selling/renting it out?

In such cases, you would contribute to more people being able to move in or stay in their home area. Which in turn leads to more children going to preschool and school, services such as gas station and store can remain and new businesses can start up in the areas. We are aware that there can be several reasons why a property is considered unoccupied, perhaps it is a holiday home where you spend a lot of time or there is something that hinders the process such as co-ownership, emotional ties or that it simply feels too complicated.
